HIGHLIGHTS OF THE HUMAN SERVICES MAJOR

1. The Human Services major offers undergraduate preparation for further study and careers in mental health and counseling, social work, community organization and planning, policy analysis, administration of human services agencies, gerontology, and elementary school teaching.

2. A human services worker may directly or indirectly provide mental health or social services to clients, supervise personnel, administer programs, and develop policies or support services for professional staff in such areas as healthcare, housing, recreation, education.

3. The curriculum of the Human Services major emerged from courses taught through the University’s Interdisciplinary Center in the early 1970’s. Some of these classes emphasized personal growth within interactive groups. This self-awareness and humanistic focus has remained a distinctive mark of what we offer.

4. An equally distinctive mark has been the emphasis on applied learning through experience in fieldwork placements in community settings. The Human Services Program at CSUF is one of the few undergraduate human services program on the West Coast that are approved by the Council for Standards in Human Services Education. Students will have the opportunity to experience three fieldwork situations, each for 120 hours of supervised practice. The benefits of working in the community are numerous and often result in important professional connections as well as developing the student’s sense-of professional identity.

5. The curriculum is structured around four interrelated components: (1) theoretical foundations and Intervention strategies, (2) client populations and cultural diversity, (3) research and evaluation, and (4) skill development through exploration within oneself and experience in the field. Features of our curriculum have been frequently presented in professional lectures and publications. Textbooks developed for our courses are widely used internationally.

6. The permanent faculty has been drawn from diverse disciplines, supplemented by part-time faculty who are professionally active in the community. We currently have approximately 20 faculty position (12 full-time) and 600+ majors, and offer 120+ course sections each semester. Students are enthusiastic participants in class, social and community activities.

7. Faculty and students are known and respected; students are well received in placements and in graduate schools. Our graduates have reported that our blend of theory and experiential learning has enabled them to excel in their professional development. About half of the Human Services graduates enter graduate programs in social work, counseling, psychology, public administration, and education. Those that choose to work in the field before attending graduate school have positions such as child protective service workers, probation officers, outreach workers, case managers, and residential treatment workers. Many of our graduates have paid positions immediately upon graduating from our program. In fact, many of our graduates found work in agencies such as the YMCA Counseling Services, Orange County Department of Probation, Orange County Department of Mental Health, the Orange County Conservation Corps, Lampson Elementary School, Women’s Transitional Living Center, Crittendon, and AIDS Services Foundation. Many of these professionals will eventually complete graduate studies.

8. The Human Services Major leads to a Bachelor of Science degree, and requires 54 units. (21 units are required for a minor in Human services.) The major includes 18 units of advisor-approved electives within six advisement tracks (A) Mental Health (Counseling or Social Work), (B) Administration and Community Practice (leading to graduate study in social work administration and policy, community organization and planning, public administration, or management), (C) Substance Abuse Treatment and Prevention, (D) Elementary Education, (E) Gerontology, or (F) Persons with Disabilities.

9. The Department has articulation agreements with many of surrounding colleges. A Human Services Academic Advisor may approve of the transfer of up to twelve units of related course work toward the total of the fifty-four units required for the Human Services major.

10. The Human Services Department is a part of the College of Health and Human Development, characterized by a commitment to community based applied learning. Student and faculty exemplify the enthusiasm and commitment that are characteristic of Cal State University, Fullerton.
