TITAN PRIDE

Lannee is a second year Master of Social Work student with a concentration in Aging. Her long term goal is to first obtain a license in social work and then get her doctorate. A dream of hers for the future is to open a nonprofit to help underserved populations. She is the president of the Master of Social Work Association (MSWA). With being in a rigorous graduate program full time, serving as president for a club, and juggling life outside school, Lannee thrives on her voluntary contributions to the school and community. This gives her the motivation to succeed academically at her fullest potential.

What are some tips for students at CSUF?

No one said college would be easy. All we can do is “enjoy and trust the process” by doing what we can, with what we have, right where we are with the best of our abilities.

What are some challenges you faced? How did you overcome them?

A challenge I faced was balancing school, internship, work, social life, MSWA, and self care. These are all big entities in my life and it definitely has not been easy finding a healthy balance. I learned to take things one day at a time, to cause less stress.

How has CSUF prepared you for your future?

CSUF has given me the opportunity to be taught by wonderful professors, the chance to meet beautiful souls, and the resources to help and guide me through my academic career. I will forever be a Titan at heart.

What are some benefits of being involved?

MSWA has given me the opportunity to help the community in a variety of diverse networks. The organization helps and advocates for families, seniors, children, homelessness, and many more.
