A broader range of treatment modalities and the development of flexibility in students in working with various populations.

The CSUF staff does an excellent job to prepare the practicum students. I would suggest not having the weekly progress reports as a requirement.

It might be useful, in efforts to raise awareness of students in regard to cultures/multi-culturalism, to include a stronger emphasis on majority culture awareness and critical race theory.

Keep us in mind for future intern placements.

reduce the number of pages to be completed by the Intern site.

9. Other Ideas or Comments

Students appear to be wedded to a specific orientation, primarily "sand tray" and/or play therapy, which is not always the treatment of choice in working with individuals and families. The stance of NOT asking questions only observing behavior is not particularly helpful in working with abused children when you need enough information to file a child abuse report (CAR).
